A talk by Anthony O'Hear

Professor Anthony O'Hear has been Professor of Philosophy and Head of the Department of Education at the University of Buckingham since 2003. He is an authority on the Philosophy of Science, Religion, Aesthetics and Culture. His depth of experience and knowledge in these fields makes him ideally suited to demonstrating how Ruskin's nineteenth century teachings remain so relevant in the twenty-first century. Among his books are Karl Popper, Education, Society and Human Nature, Experience, Explanation and Faith, Jesus for Beginners and, most recently, The Landscape of Humanity.
