

Credit controls incited high-cost evasion

Sir, The Bank of England warns that rationing may be introduced by way of credit controls (report, November 6). The credit controls of the 1960s and 1970s, while different in detail, incited all manner of high-cost evasion: disintermediation, parallel banking and offshore funding.

GR Steele

*Reader in Economics,
Lancaster University Management
School, UK*

Financial Times 11 November 2015